SEPTEMBER 18, 2007 TUESDAY 12:15 P.M. VOL. 70 NO. 38

THIS TUESDAY

Matthew Jones who is a cancer of the brain survivor will inspire us with his life story. Life is a marathon full of ups, downs and surprising turns. Matt's talk will inspire and challenge us to achieve greater success.

LAST TUESDAY

Jo Bonds, who lives in El Monte and is a docent at the Cabrillo Marine Museum provided a slide presentation of whales.

Jo has been a whale watcher and whale census taker for over 22 years. She has been watching whales in Canada, Hawaii, and Baja.

Some of the things we learned:

The largest whale is the Blue Whale

114 feet long,

57 tons

2,500 pounds at birth

15 feet long

2-3 tons of food are eaten daily

6-8 inches of blubber

2 blowholes

3 stomachs

They have teeth, but do not chew. They tear.

All cetaceans, including whales, dolphins and porpoises, are descendants of land-living mammals of the Artiodactyl order (even-toed ungulate animals). Both cetaceans and artiodactyl are now classified under the super-order Cetartiodactyla which includes both whales and hippos. In fact, whales are the closest living relatives of hippos; they evolved from a common ancestor at around 54 million years ago. Whales entered the water roughly 50 million years ago. Cetaceans are divided into two suborders:

The baleen whales are characterized by baleen, a sieve-like structure in the upper jaw made of keratin, which they use to filter plankton from the water. They are the largest species of whale.

The toothed whales have teeth and prey on fish, squid, or both. An outstanding ability of this group is to sense their surrounding environment through echolocation.

Guests also attending the meeting were Lisa Montesanti, Philip, and possible new member John Tyre. Also attending were John Gera's line dancing groupies, Barbara Gera, Patty Monroe, and Josefina Araiza. A possible good program would be them showing us their tush-push.

OTHER HAPPENINGS

A thank you letter from Sharon Johnson and Cathe Wilson was read to the Club. We donated $1,000 to the Blue Star Program to help replace worn banners honoring our troops.

John and Sue Chandler took a 4,300 trip to Canada to see their son compete in a Iron Man Competition.

Please get your dues to Mike Miller ASAP. Please contact him with any special request.

Let Chuck Shaw know if you will be attending the Installation party at the Old Spaghetti Factory on September 25th.

Mr. Happy #2 Bob Tyler is recovering from cataract surgery.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"The most remarkable thing about my mother is that for thirty years she served the family nothing but leftovers. The original meal has never been found."

- Calvin Trillin

See you Tuesday, Jerry
